COMMUNITY MOOD · DAY BY DAY

5/10 · -2 vs last week

Previously: Michael (RadixScan) proposed a Series LLC provision for sub-DAOs, Daffy took it to the next legal meeting, and Nicolai's Muan Protocol launched on mainnet.

A tense governance week: Phil Gibson pressed the Transition RAC all week on transparency, accountability and its actual remit, while projectShift defended the council's narrow, legally privileged work. The community also debated who pays for Radix's next chapter, what happens to the wallet, and whether Xi'an's code should ship open or protected.

WHAT THE ROOM TALKED ABOUT

Transition RAC transparency and remit

Phil Gibson spent Saturday pressing the council to publish individual updates, host biweekly X Spaces and take over the RAC Telegram channel, still owned by Peachy. projectShift pledged individual bylines on future posts, said most work is attorney-client privileged, and warned that replacing members mid-transition could reset the whole handover.

DAO activation pace and advisory limits

Daffy confirmed that until the DAO is live, any proposal is advisory only, while Phil Gibson argued members should be elected in parallel so the community isn't idle for 10+ weeks. projectShift said the Marshall Islands registry typically takes a month for a constitution and the RAC can't control that timeline.

Who pays for Radix's next chapter

Adam argued the DAO should act like a board and pick priorities (wallet, ecosystem, partnerships) before scoping details, while Vlad B said Radix needs a paid business front-office. Phil Gibson filed a Strategic Council RFC on RadixTalk proposing paid Lead positions for product, marketing and partnerships.

Open source or protected Xi'an

Vlad B pushed to keep parts of Radix's code proprietary so partners like Cloudflare can't fork it for free. projectShift and flightofthefox pushed back: closed source is a non-starter in crypto, and Hyperscale is already committed to the Apache 2.0 licence and can't be reversed.

THE BOTTOM LINE

REMEMBER THIS

The Transition RAC came under week-long pressure over transparency and pace, just as the community realised the Permanent RAC may struggle to find candidates at all.

NEXT WEEK

Watch for: named-byline RAC updates, movement on the Marshall Islands registration, and reactions to the Strategic Council RFC and market-maker contract expiry.

COUNCIL & INSIDER WATCH

The Transition RAC made no decisions this week. projectShift acknowledged RAC posts had been anonymous, pledged individual attribution going forward, and explained that most current work is protected by attorney-client privilege while the Marshall Islands registration proceeds on its own timeline.

projectShift TRANSITION RAC

Defended the RAC's narrow legal focus, pledged named bylines on future updates, said the MI registry takes about a month for a constitution, and flagged finding real Permanent RAC candidates as the existential worry once the DAO activates.

"I personally don't give two shits on common sense. What's needed is good sense, wisdom."

Daffy DAO LEGAL WORK

Confirmed that until the DAO is activated every proposal is advisory only, and explained the RAC's pre-DAO responsibilities come from the Foundation-initiated RAC Election Proposal, switching to the RAC Mandate after activation.

flightofthefox HYPERSCALE DEV

Warned the market-maker contracts expire in 2–3 months, likely before the DAO is ready, argued Radix's real lever is the cost-per-compute governance knob, and insisted open source is non-negotiable for crypto infrastructure.

"Closing source isn't a moat, it's just a guarantee to not be taken seriously in this industry."

Tadkis TRANSITION RAC

Raised the alarm that no one owns the wallet's future after the Foundation stepped back, urged the community to debate it on RadixTalk rather than wait for a CEO.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

"What does the RAC actually do before the DAO activates?"

Pre-DAO, the RAC carries the responsibilities set out in the Foundation-initiated RAC Election Proposal; after activation it switches to the RAC Mandate in the Governance Framework — and interpreting the pre-DAO role is up to the RAC itself.

DEBATE OF THE WEEK — HOW WIDE IS THE RAC'S REMIT

ONE SIDE

The RAC's primary-interface role obliges it to actively drive wallet ownership, individual accountability and a new community-facing channel.

THE OTHER

The RAC's job is narrow legal and administrative DAO setup, mostly protected by attorney-client privilege; replacing members mid-transition could reset the entire handover.

THE PULSE

The mood: Tense and impatient: sustained criticism of the council’s pace and transparency, mixed with genuine debate about funding leadership and the wallet’s future.

PREDICTION TRACKER

NEW Market-maker contracts expire before the DAO is ready flightofthefox warned the contracts end in 2-3 months, likely sooner than DAO activation.

NEW Fork consideration if DAO stalls two months
Phil Gibson and Azel suggested a fork becomes a serious consideration if the DAO isn't in place in roughly two months.

NEW Permanent RAC candidate shortage at activation projectShift worries the community has many demanders but few willing to deliver as delegates.

JARGON, DECODED

Attorney-client privilege — A legal protection that keeps communications between a lawyer and their client confidential, so the RAC cannot publish those details.

RAC Mandate — The document in the Governance Framework defining the council's role once the DAO company is activated.

Apache 2.0 — A permissive open-source licence under which Hyperscale's code is published, letting anyone use and extend it.
